Dear Dr. Lederberg:

My book on lifelong learning for practicing physicians is proceeding satisfactorily. From our phone conversation of several months ago, Dr. DeBakey and I have developed an essay that we feel would fit in beautifully. It would emphasize the importance of curiosity and the need to immerse one's self in problem-solving situations. I would appreciate it very much if you would review the material, making any changes that you desire. I would like to include this modified version in the book if you agree.

Sincerely,
